Intro

Everything we experience today is identified and very closely associated with some brand or other. Modern marketing communications now dominate a hierarchical system of human identification and classification. In our consumerist society, freedom is simply one's ability to define one's relative identity by the brands one is able to acquire… or rub up against. The human circumstance is no longer a matter of who we are, but whom we are better branded than.

In UPGRADE, Sabga presents a satirical evaluation of some of the country's traditional branding/classification devices – our range of affordable names.
